He grabbed my hips and pulled me closer, I could feel my heart pounding out of my chest, I was nervous. He leaned in and kissed me. After a few seconds we stopped kissing and stared into each others eyes. He kissed me again and this time we fell onto his bed. While kissing me he lowered his hand to unbutton my shorts, I tried to stop him but I wanted more. He stopped kissing me for a second to pull my shorts off. ## Chapter 2 by Phantim

He was my first boyfriend. I was his first girlfriend. For almost half the school year we were too shy to even hold hands. When we went to the school dance together, he got so nervous when he saw me in my dress that he went to the bathroom and threw up! I know that might seem gross or pathetic, but honestly I thought it was adorable. He was so sweet and awkward. Things had progressed pretty quickly though since then. I still remember that night at the county fair when I had given him everything.

He had almost graduated a year ago, but the bus accident changed everything. And now, I can not afford to go away to college, and I have a boyfriend in a wheelchair with a face covered in bandages.

They say he's lucky to be alive. At first, I laughed because I didn't think anything in the world that could harm his rock-hard body. He was either the captain or president of everything, and if it weren't for the crash, he'd probably continue to climb through life. But now, he was in a wheelchair, and his muscle was fading into fat.

His family was gone. His entire family had died in the bus crash. It was humid July afternoon, the two tour busses drove too quickly down the twisting roads of Upstate New York and got lost in the haze of heat creeping up from the asphalt, all 100 of them died. The tri-annual Klein Family Reunion was the most tragic family reunion ever. And now, I feel stuck.

The bandages come off next week, and they say he'll walk again. And eventually, the courts will sort out the insurance payments. But for now, I am scared.

Chapter 7 by CMAW

My shock processed so slowly that hours passed in between my thoughts. I hated what I had heard so much that I could barely even take it in. It was only two sentences that ruined my life.

"I'm sorry, Jasmine, your boyfriend has slipped into an unexpected coma from his wounds. We are afraid he may never awaken," the doctor told me.

I found myself plunged into depression. I sat by his bedside every day, begging for him to wake up. I felt torn apart. He was right there next to me, but yet he wasn't. I missed his optimism, his smile, his everything. I could practically see my life crashing down around me.

And then one day his eyes fluttered open.

He opens his mouth to say something. His voice, his oh so precious voice. I can hear it again. As the anticipation begins to kill me, he simply says "Who are you?"
